Equities – In early November, following the US election result, we decided to do a special rebalance in order to capture market moves following Donald Trump's victory. At this rebalance we increased our allocation to core developed market equities, to reflect a less defensive outlook on the asset class. Within equities, we closed our emerging market equities versus European and Japanese equities trade, on the back of significant market movements within emerging market equities. Meanwhile, within equities we implemented a new trade of reducing global small caps in favour of global technology. This rebalance aligns us more closely with our positive view on equities.

Manager research – At this rebalance, as part of a broader review of the ESG portfolios, we removed exposure to Amundi EM Green bond fund and invested proceeds into the L&G ESG Emerging Markets Government Bond (USD) Index fund. There were no other manager changes.

Bonds - At this rebalance, we adjusted the portfolios' duration downwards, by reducing developed market government bonds and global index-linked bonds. By doing this we have shifted the portfolios to reflect our neutral view on duration. We have also further reduced our UK credit exposure to reflect a more negative outlook on the asset class as the spreads on UK credit continue to tighten. In our view, credit spreads remain tight and do not offer sufficient compensation for the potential risks ahead, and as such, we continue to maintain a negative view on the asset class.

Alternatives – At this rebalance, we allocated more to our absolute return strategies as a means of redirecting the cash that resulted from the changes described above. We continue to actively monitor and manage the portfolios to ensure they remain within their risk profiles.

*We recently made changes to the ESG portfolios. Since launch, these were designed to have a greater allocation to external, ESG focused active managers (in the region of 40%). At the May rebalance, we transitioned the MPS ESG models with the proportion of ESG focused active managers dropping to 10%. This will bring them far closer to a model version of the Future World Multi Index funds which LGIM recognises as their target Multi-Asset ESG approach for the UK wholesale market (and which have recently received a Silver rating from Morningstar on 31 July 2024).

Awards and ratings should not be considered a recommendation. Past performance is not a guide to the future.
